Uncle Sam Says

Thousands of farmers and ranchers all over America are making certain today that their future will be bright and promising by continuing to invest all they can in U. S. Savings Bonds. They realize that this is the safest, surest way to build that financial reserve so necessary to the successful management of a ranch or farm—to provide new buildings, to finance repairs and improvements, to purchase additional livestock and equipment, and to insure a future income on which to retire. Every $75 planted in U. S. Savings Bonds today will grow, in just ten years, into $100.

Earl Sets Up Roadside Mart To Save Estate

LONDON—The traveler or motorist passing Stafford may stop at the roadside and buy apples and cabbages grown by the premier earl of England and Ireland.

Not exactly from his lordship, of course, but certainly from the fields owned and managed by the 34-year old Earl of Shrewsbury and Waterford. The earl lives in stately Ingestre Hall and is known locally as the "tilled Barrow boy."

The vegetable stand is not a pose or a stunt. The roadside enterprise, the earl explains, is just a commonsense effort to help save what is left of the premier earldom of the realm. It was created in 1442, and while it is not the oldest earldom in the land, it is the first in prestige protocol.

Cash Running Out

Under a Socialist administration and in an age in which the rural landlord is fast running out of ready cash, desperate measures were called for to preserve at least the heart of the old estate.

There was a good deal to save and the earl, passing out farm produce, is by no means a pauper—he's just land poor. One measure was the sale of a third of the 6,000 acre estate; another was the roadside vegetable stand. The earl formerly sold produce and game to dealers and restaurants. He decided to reduce prices to the ultimate consumer and increase his own earnings by cutting out the middleman.

He now dreams of setting up a string of stands and shops to be provisioned by the thousands of acres still under his control.

He is equally proud of the sign on the vegetable stand which informs the passer that the 21st earl of Shrewsbury and Waterford is "licensed to deal in game." Such licenses are difficult to get, but the earl has his. Some of the games for sale is shot by the earl himself in the woods and fields about Ingestre Hall.

The auction sale of about 2,000 acres, divided into 13 farms and numerous small plots, was a spectacular example of what is happening to Britain's aristocracy. It's not as cushy to be an earl as it was.

Kept Old Tenants

When the earl decided he had to retrench by selling some lands which had been in the family since the year 1170 he arranged, as far as possible, to have his old tenants buy the properties they occupied. The sale was necessary, said the auctioneer, because of the "merciless taxation" to which the land has been subjected. The sale realized about $414,000 under the old valuation of the British pound.

"That's pretty good," the earl remarked ruefully, but Sir Stafford Cripps (chancellor of the exchequer) will get most of it."

The former tenants, who are now just neighbors, are as proud of the premier earldom as the lord himself. They boast that the seventh earl of Shrewsbury won 40 battles in the 15th century wars against France, and that the 20th earl, grandfather of the present holder of the title, deserves well of history because he got the bright idea of putting rubber tires on hansom cabs. London became a quieter town.

Scottish Writer Has Term For Modern Big-Word Usage

PERTH, SCOTLAND.—There is a word for all that fancy, modern, streamlined wordage you've been hearing and reading lately — it's "barnacular."

That's what author - journalist Ivor Brown calls it. And he says those "ten-dollar words" are clinging like parasitic barnacles to the vernacular, the plain, old language most people speak every day.

For instance, he points out that no one is ever "ill" nowadays—he is just "maladjusted." A "bad boy" is that no longer, he is a "juvenile delinquent."

"If a man calls food 'food,'" Brown went on, "he is branded as a simple fellow, but if he can write a mamo about 'units of nutritional intake' he is regarded as indispensable and, most likely, gets a raise in pay."

Citing further examples, he observed that no one is ever "poor" anymore—he is "underprivileged."

"We have 'wonder girls,' 'glamour girls' and 'swim suits,'" he said, "and only 'blondes' appear in court. Brunettes either stay innocent outside or the color of their hair is never mentioned."

President Blames Ink Spot For Poor Room Acoustics

WASHINGTON. — Seldom irritable, the President was showing signs of it as he had to repeat himself several times at his regular news conference because reporters couldn't hear him.

But it wasn't his fault, he said. He blamed the poor acoustics on the fact that someone had spilled ink on his nice, inch-thick office rug and it was out being cleaned.

FOLLOW-UP PROGRAM UNDERWAY FOR FARMS

FIGURING IN FIELD DAYS

Each of the seven Virginia farms which have been scenes of soil conservation field day programs over the past two years will serve as "teaching units for soil saving," according to E. W. Mundie, soil conservationist for the Extension Service.

Advisory committees have been appointed in the counties which had field days. The committees will help farmers follow through on conservation plans, and complete any unfinished work left over from the field days.

Mundie said, however, that the field days left very little unfinished work.
